BLIZZARDS IN WEST

Hard Hailstorm Rakes City at 2 o'clock Monday Afternoon

The federal weather report issued at noon Monday, indicating a cold wave and hard freeze for south Arkansas Monday night, was followed at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon by a heavy hail storm in Hope and adjacent territory. The mercury fell sharply after midnight Sunday as rain deluged Hempstead county, and it grew colder all day Monday. The forecast is from 18 to 20 degrees for this section, with a warning to livestock owners.

9 Injured in Tornadoes FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—Nine persons were injured, two seriously, when tornadoes struck twice in western Arkansas Sunday night.

A storm near Branch destroyed eight residences and injured eight persons. The other storm was near Greenwood. The tornadoes were followed by heavy rain, which turned to snow Monday.

Winter Strikes Again LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Winter returned suddenly to Arkansas Monday and a light snow in the northern section heralded the approach of a new cold wave which is expected to send thermometers down to far below freezing Monday night.

A minimum temperature of 12 is indicated in some sections, and the Weather Bureau warned that livestock should be protected. For the south end of the state the forecast is 18 to 20 degrees. In Fayetteville there was a light overnight snowfall which continued Monday morning with the temperature down to 20 degrees. Cold rains fell elsewhere in the state.

Blizzards Grip West KANSAS CITY—(AP)—Death and extensive property damage Sunday accompanied tornadoes, blizzards, deep snow and blinding dust in the Central West.

Blizzards raged from Canada through Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado and Nebraska. Snow, six to eight inches in depth at Denver, Cheyenne, Wyo., and Goodland, Kan., covered thousands of dry acres. Wyoming was blanketed completely. Dust storms, which slowed up trains and drove sections hounds to cover near Colorado Springs, whined across parts of Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas and Wyoming. Dust and snow were churned crazily by a wind in zero weather at Gothenburg, Neb.

Hamilton Kidnaps Farm Boy, Gets Car

Makes Getaway in Stolen Machine After Escaping Police Ambush

MCKINNEY, Texas.—(AP)—Raymond Hamilton and another gunman kidnaped a 16-year-old farm boy late Sunday night and escaped in his car after abandoning the bullet-torn machine in which they fled from officers who had tried to trap them near McKinney. It was discovered Monday. A farmer and his wife reported seeing the hard-pressed outlaws hold up the farm boy with automatic rifles and climb into his roadster. The youth was still missing at noon Monday.

Escapes Ambush

MCKINNEY, Texas.—(AP)—Raymond Hamilton, notorious Texas desert fugitive, escaped a carefully laid police trap three miles from McKinney Sunday night, but officers who laid the ambush believed they wounded him. Two men occupied the front seat of Hamilton's motor car. "We are certain we wounded him," said Police Chief John McKinney, "because the car was stopped out of range of the officers' gunfire to allow a change in drivers." Hamilton recently escaped from a police trap in Dallas which ultimately resulted in capture of his brother, Floyd. Later Hamilton raided a Texas National Guard armory and there

Fuller Verdict Is Reduced to $5,000

Supreme Court Holds Judgment Against Sinclair Excessive

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court held Monday that judgment for $8,500 given Homer Fuller of Hempstead county, against the Sinclair Refining company as damages on an allegation of slander was excessive, and reduced the amount to $5,000.

Fuller charged he had been slandered after being dismissed as agent for the company. The court prohibited Circuit Judge Thomas Toler from proceeding with a contempt action against W. T. Tate, Jr., Little Rock attorney for Mark Shank of Akron, Ohio, who is under death sentence.

The circuit court had cited Tate for contempt during the Shank trial a year and a half ago, charging that Tate executed two witnesses without the court's knowledge.

U. S. Imports Grain for the First Time

1934 Drouth Cut Feed and Food Crops to Lowest Since 1880

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Drouth and AAA crop restrictions transformed the United States—probably for the first time in its history—from a heavy exporter into an importer of feed and foodstuffs during 1934.

The crops in 1934 were the smallest since 1880. As a result, prices increased to a point where other nations could ship to the United States, scale the high tariff walls, and still make a profit. Considerable food and feedstuffs, including wheat, were exported from the United States early in 1934. But with the drouth, came a sudden change in habits fixed over the generations when the rich Middle Western fields were the wheat and corn granaries of the world. The trend, officials said, had continued into 1935 and probably would go on until the price of food and feed declines.

For the first time on record, wheat was imported from France in 1934. Total wheat imports from all countries during the latter half of 1934 totaled 1,231,000 bushels as compared with the 175,000,000 bushels which the United States normally exported to foreign nations only a few years ago.

Filing of charges against Foster grew out of allegations of a 15-year-old Blevins girl.

He made emphatic denial that he was connected "with any Communist movement."

Jones came here from DeQueen Sunday night and left for New Llano, La., Monday.

Majority Vote Is Claimed for the Thorn Package Bill

Two Weeks' Work on Amendments to Bill Is Completed

REVENUE MEASURE

Speaker Declares Traffic Should Be Controlled by State Bureau

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Thorn package sales liquor bill was defeated furiously in the house Monday as its sponsors, claiming sufficient strength to pass it, sought to bring the measure to a final vote during the afternoon.

Speaker Harve Thorne, chief of the bill, took no time in explaining its provisions since it had been argued for two weeks while many amendments were being tacked on.

Thorn said the bone-dry law has proven a failure, and "the time has come to take control of the traffic away from the bootlegger and put it where it belongs—with the commissioner of revenue."

Noon recess held the debate until the afternoon session. The senate was in recess Monday morning, to reconvene from its week-end holiday at 2 p. m.

Liquor Bills Up LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Fate of liquor legislation bills pending in the legislature was to be determined in the senate, in the house, which will convene at 9:30 a. m., and in the senate, which will meet at 2 p. m., the package store liquor bills are special orders for debate and passage.

Amendments have left Speaker Thorne's bill differing in several respects from Senator Dillon's, but these conflicts will be ironed out, perhaps by a conference committee. It is the measure's passage in the respective branches of the assembly.

Governor Futrell has called on the legislature to legalize liquor sales, provide money and means to enforce the prohibition laws. Anti-liquor forces have indicated that an enforcement bill will be introduced by Representative J. C. Dawson of Faulkner county.

Must Make Appropriations After Monday, only 15 working days remain before the close of the 60-day session, and budget committee appropriations bills will be entitled to clearance, but little or no controversy is expected to develop over them.

The sales tax bill, passed in the senate, has not been called up in the house, but the revenue and taxation committee has scheduled a hearing on it for Tuesday night. Many house members are disposed to defer action on the sales tax until other revenue legislation is enacted, in the hope that it may not be necessary to adopt the two per cent levy on retail sales.

The senate revenue and taxation committee will conduct a hearing Monday night on the bill passed by the house to increase the tax on income of individuals and to remove exemptions at present allowed corporations.

Probers to Confer

Further developments involving Commonwealth College, an institution for workers, located near Menard, are expected. Representative Marcus Miller of Polk county, chairman of a joint committee investigating alleged Communist activities at the college, has announced that the committee will confer Monday night on a proposal that increased authority be sought, so that inquiry may be made into reports of radicalism in various parts of the state.

Commonwealth College representatives are opposing strenuously a so-called anti-sedition bill, which the house has passed, and some of them are expected to urge its defeat during a hearing Tuesday night before the senate judiciary committee to which it was referred.

Markets

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Cotton Monday opened fairly active and steady although Liverpool cables came in somewhat lower than due and sterling was weaker.

First trades showed no change to two points down. Prices eased off one to two points after the start, mainly due to March liquidation in New York. The first notice day for the option in that market is Tuesday.

March traded down to 12.23. May to 12.39. July to 12.45 and October to 12.39. This made the price level near the end of the first half hour two to three points below Saturday's close.

New York

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, unchanged to three lower with active March liquidation absorbed by the trade and spot houses. March 12.24; May 12.37; July 12.43; October 12.39; December 12.48; January 12.49.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Col. Ed Halsey, secretary of the Senate, has been here so long that he even can remember when Congress thought $1000 was a lot of money.

Thirty-seven years ago, Halsey went to work as a page. But only three decades ago, he recalls, as the senate considers spending five billion dollars for relief alone, Senator Edmund Pettus of Alabama was telling a constituent about to listen to a debate: "You won't understand it. They don't mean anything less than $1000."

Born in Illinois, Fred Dins After an estrangement of many years, Senators Hiram Johnson and Bill Borah jointly led the fight against Give Your Baby Name That's Distinctive.

Popular names for children run in cycles. One year many of the babies will be named Robert, the next year Richard, and then perhaps after a while John will come again into vogue.

A recent investigator asserts that Mary is the most common name for girls, representing one in 24 of all women; Elizabeth runs a close second, with one in 27, then come Margaret and Helen, with one in 40. Among older women the percentage of Mary's is much larger.

Among women in colleges in 1927, Elizabeths were more frequent than Marys, then came Mary and Helen, after that Dorothy and Margaret, and in sixth place Marie. In seventh place was Katherine and after that Louise, Ruth, and Eleanor.

It is believed that the reason for changing popularity is purely psychological. It is suddenly observed that a family has too many Helens or Dorothys, so a new name is thought up. At the same time other families are having the same trouble and some new name that is popular comes into vogue.

People are guided by many influences in choosing names. After the war Jean was most popular. At the time when Florence Nightingale was much in the limelight, the name of Florence almost led all the rest. As an example of the way in which names run in cycles, Ruth was the most common name chosen in 1900; it fell to ninth place in 1905, and rose to fifth place in 1910.

It would be well if parents would remember, when naming their babies, to avoid names that go out of style. These are fancy names. At the same time avoid the popular name, because one that is too popular takes away such distinction as may attach to a rather unusual name.

It is also well to remember that certain names have come to be associated with occupations, such as Bridget for a cook, and Dinah for a colored cook. Flower names, like Pansy, Lily, and Violet, are rapidly passing out of style and also jewels, like Ruby and Opal.

Parents will also do well to consider what happens to the names when they are reduced to initials. The Grays, for instance, should reconsider naming their boy Henry Oliver Gray.

The study of boys' names reveals William and John as most common, representing one in 20, then follow James, George, Charles, Harold, Robert, Edward, Joseph, and Arthur.

Boys' names are less susceptible to changing styles than are those of girls. The first five on the list have been steadily in that position since 1885.

It is interesting to realize that the names Percy, Reginald, and Algernon passed out of vogue with the British influence in the early part of the last century, probably because they came to be associated with certain rather undesirable mental characteristics.

A Look at the New Murder Mysteries—There's Something for Every Taste in This List.

There's something for almost every taste in the midwinter crop of murder mysteries. Here are a few of the new ones:

"The Hangover Murders," by Adam Hobhouse (Knopf: $2). Members of the Long Island polo set get all ginned up and come to find one of their number slain. Since nobody can remember what happened last night, it's all rather annoying; solved, at last, by a tough New York copper. A tale in the Dashiell Hammett manner, featured by some of the most prodigious two-handed drinking ever seen on land or sea.

"The Corpse in the Green Fumaces," by R. A. J. Walling (Morrow: $2); all about a gent who is found dead in a secret passage in an old English castle. An excellent example of the rhetorical, straightaway story of deduction—no frills but plenty of good, solid meat.

SILKEN SPINDLES

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, Phil, support their blind father.

STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She delays giving her answer. Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in the navy to take his place in the mill.

VICKY WESTMORE, daughter of BRIAN'S father, present manager of the mill, schemes to marry Brian. She sees him with Gale and is furious. Convinced to meet Gale, she tells her that she (Vicky) and Brian are engaged. Gale believes Brian has been amusing himself at her expense and is deeply hurt. A day later, coming home from the mill, she meets Brian.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIV

BRIAN hurried forward. He said, "I've been waiting for you. I wanted to talk to you, Gale."

"What about?" She was glad to know that her voice was steady. He couldn't tell from hearing it that her pulse was racing, that there were fires in her temples. She asked again, "What did you want to talk to me about?"

Brian stood in front of her, blocking the way. "About the other evening," he said. "I want to know what's wrong." "There's nothing wrong." "Oh, but there is! There must be. Why wouldn't you let me come back after I'd taken Vicky home the other night? You said I could come to see you. Don't you remember? Sunday."

"I was tired," Gale put in quickly. She didn't want him to go on, didn't want to be reminded of that Sunday afternoon. "I just didn't want to see anyone."

"You're sure it wasn't anything more than that?" "Yes, I'm sure."

"Then you'll let me come tonight?"

Gale shook her head. "No," she said. "Not tonight."

"But Gale—"

"I'm not going to be home tonight," the girl went on quickly. "I'm sorry, but you mustn't come."

"Tomorrow?"

"I don't think you'd better come tomorrow, either."

"Gale!" Brian's hand was on her arm. "There is something wrong! Something you haven't told me. What is it?"

"Nothing."

"But that's not true—I mean it can't be! Why won't you tell me about it? You're not a bit like yourself today."

"How do you know that? How do you know what I'm really like?"

"I do know it. I know you're not being yourself. I wish you'd tell me what it is that's made you change like this."

"I haven't changed," she told him calmly. "If you think so it's because you didn't know me before. But that's not surprising. After all, you can't judge a person when you've only met them once or twice."

"But I can judge—I mean, oh, Gale, I don't know what's come over you! You know how I feel about you. You promised Sunday—"

SHE couldn't stand much more of this. She couldn't go on listening to Brian talking as though she were the one at fault, pretending things were just as they had been between them. She said, surprising herself:

"You keep talking about Sunday. Don't you think you'd better forget about that?"

"Do you want to forget it?" "Yes, yes, I do. When a girl's engaged to marry a man—"

"Oh!" Brian's exclamation was sharp. He stared down at her. "Why didn't you tell me that before? Why didn't you say you were engaged?"

That startled her. It wasn't what she had meant, but it didn't make any difference now. Gale was glad Brian thought that. She said, "Why should I have told you?"

"But I thought—"

She went on recklessly. "Yes, I'm engaged. I'm—I'm going to be married before long. In June, June weddings are nicest, don't you think?"

It wasn't exactly a falsehood, she assured herself. Steve had asked her to marry him; she could be engaged to Steve tonight, if she wanted to be. They could be married in June, too. The same month Brian and Vicky Thatcher were to be married. Gale was glad she had said it. Brian needn't think he could carry on a flirtation, persuade her to care for him, and then leave her, broken-hearted. She'd show him how little she cared! Two could play at flirtation—and she'd prove it.

Brian didn't say anything for a moment. He stood there, his eyes searching hers. Then he said slowly, "I—I guess I was mistaken about the whole thing. You'll let me wish you every happiness?"

"Thank you."

"Of course, now that I know how it is, I see why you wouldn't want me hanging around. I'm sorry if I bothered you—"

"It doesn't matter," Gale told him.

Oh, but it did matter terribly! She couldn't stand there another moment. She put one hand to her cheek, pushing a wisp of hair beneath her hat brim.

"I've got to get home," she said, "but I want to wish you happiness, too. I hope you'll be very happy—and I'm sure you're going to be. Good night."

Brian stood in the center of the sidewalk, watching as she hurried down the street.

TOM HENDERSON pushed his chair back from the dinner table and said, "Did you read about the airplane that fell in California has invented, Phil?"

Phil shook his head. "Claims he can break all the speed records. Queer looking contraption—"

Tom Henderson launched into a technical discussion of the new plane. Ever since Phil, as a youngster 5 years old, had discovered his father's tool chest and the treasures therein, the two of them had talked over mechanical inventions, spent hours in the makeshift workshop back of the house, tinkering with this and with that.

But tonight Phil did not seem interested in the new airplane. He asked a question or two, then lapsed into moody silence.

Gale asked, "Would you like another cup of tea, Father?"

"No—yes, I believe I would. Oh, did I tell you Steve was here for a few minutes before you got home?"

"What did he want?" the girl asked.

I don't know. Said he'd drop in later."

Gale said, "It probably wasn't anything of much importance."

A little later, while she was splashing soapy water over the plates and cups and saucers in the dishpan her father came into the kitchen. He was looking for his spectacles, he said.

Gale thought they might be on the living room table. Her father lounged in the doorway.

"You should have asked Phil to help you with those dishes," he said. "You look tired."

"I'm not," Gale assured him. "I don't mind doing them alone."

"I'd rather."

TOM HENDERSON said, "You've been around the house too much lately. When Steve comes why don't you and he go out somewhere?"

"Maybe we will."

"Steve's a fine boy," Tom Henderson went on. He had found the glasses, was holding them up to the light, wiping the lenses.

"I know he is, Father."

"He's steady, reliable. Got the right ideas. Steve'll make some girl a good husband."

"Yes," Gale agreed. Her father didn't say any more. It had been an effort, the girl knew, for him to say that much. But she knew what he meant. He had said almost the same things before. He wanted to feel that Gale's future was settled, safeguarded. He wanted her to marry Steve.

She didn't think more about it until half an hour later. There was a knock on the living room door then and Gale hurried to open it. Steve faced her. She said, "Hello. Come in, won't you?"

"I can't stay," Steve told her. "There's going to be a dance at Parker's tomorrow night. I wanted to ask if you'd like to go."

Why not? Why shouldn't she go to the dance with Steve? And why couldn't she make up her mind to marry him? That was what her father wanted. Steve was kind and reliable and honorable. He was everything Brian Westmore was not.

Why not—

Gale said, "Yes, Steve, I'd love to go to the dance."

Tomorrow, she told herself, she'd settle the matter once and for all. Tomorrow she'd tell Steve that she would marry him.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

All Greek to You.

Grecian-type coiffures to go with the new flowing evening clothes are flattering to nearly everyone. They make you look regal as a Greek statue and at the same time give you a chance to show off your ears and that nice line at the back of your neck.

The most charming ones are done up with tiny ringlets instead of flat waves. Generally, unless the hair is naturally curly, a permanent wave is advisable. To begin all of your hair should be combed upward all the way around. The mass that is piled on top is separated into small strands and each section is then rolled to make a flat ringlet. The more ringlets you have on top, the more authentic the Grecian hairdress will be.

If you want to look quite dashing, pull a few locks down over one side of the forehead and make ringlets of them, too. The sides may be waved or left sleek in a pulled-upward movement.

With long hair, the Grecian coiffure really is easier to arrange. A rather round, but flat, bun is pinned high on the crown of the head. Shorter hairs that won't stay tucked in are curled into little ringlets. You can have bangs, if you like, and jeweled ornaments for evening.

The right hair jewelry, by the way, adds a touch of glamor to this type of coiffure. Try a carved band of ivory in olive branch motif of two or three pins in shapes that are reminiscent of Greek architecture.

NEXT: Picking a coiffure to suit your type.

"Mamma, I've got a stomach ache," said Peggy, aged five.

"That's because you haven't had any lunch yet," answered Peggy's mother. "Your stomach is empty. You would feel better if you had something in it."

That afternoon the minister called and in the course of conversation remarked that he had been suffering all day with a severe headache.

"That's because it's empty," said Peggy, brightly. "You'd feel better if you had something in it."

If you're troubled with stomach distress, gas, and you need redder blood, try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a dependable tonic.

L. F. English of 1537 W. 24th Place, Tulsa (West), Okla., said: "A few years ago my stomach troubled me. After eating, I would belch gas and my food seemed to sour. At times I had cramps in my stomach that made me miserable. I never felt like eating and had no pep. I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it certainly did the trick. It rid me of the stomach distress and I felt like eating for a change."

English Coroner's Jury Reads Americans' Farewell Notes

ROMFORD, Eng.—(AP)—After hearing read in open court two farewell notes which Jane and Elizabeth DuBois wrote before plunging to their deaths last week from an airplane a coroner's jury Monday returned a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind.

Their letters told of the sisters' grief for the death of two Royal Air Force officers.

Hamilton Kidnaps

seized submachine guns and ammunition. Two state highway patrolmen, six officers from McKinney and Dallas county officers were in the party that showered Hamilton's car with bullets as he drove slowly along an abandoned highway just after dusk Sunday night. The gunman stopped momentarily, then roared away.

The officers, after leaving their machines hidden in the brush, were handicapped in pursuit. The outlaw fled in a northwesterly direction and was believed headed toward Gainesville.

The small lad of the family had acted so badly that punishment of some sort was necessary. "Jimmy," commanded his mother, "find a switch and bring it to me." Shortly after, the bright young man returned.

"I can't find a switch, ma," he remarked, "but here's a rock you can throw at me."

The New Deal

tween these two celebrated liberal independents to be completely forgotten. Feeling between them arose as far back as 1912, when Borah refused to back the Teddy Roosevelt-Johnson Bull Moose ticket.

Then, in 1920, when Johnson was a candidate against Leonard Wood and Frank Lowden for the Republican nomination which eventually went to Harding, Borah was anxious to make the nominating speech for Hiram.

He has since been sour over the fact that Johnson gave the job to a friend from his home state who made what Borah calls "a Chamber of Commerce speech about the beauties of California" which did the candidate no good at all.

In the last congress the Johnson-Borah bitterness had been built up to its full height. The two senators even made mean cracks at each other on the senate floor.

Some Red-Hot Love "We Communists yield to no one in our love for our country," Earl Browder, general secretary and boss of the Communist party in this country as he testified before a house labor sub-committee for the Landeen unemployment insurance bill.

Browder even invoked what he called "those immortal words of the Declaration of Independence which concern the right of the people to change or abolish the form of government and institute a new one."

Squelched? Not Mullen You may remember Arthur F. Mullen of Nebraska who was forced by White House pressure to resign from the Democratic national committee so that his high-priced lobbying activities here wouldn't seem to have official sanction.

In case you supposed that idealistic New Deal officials might be diffident about associating publicly with Mr. Mullen after that, you may be interested in the description of one of Mr. Mullen's recent cocktail parties, as taken from local society columns:

"It seems that every member of the New Deal was there, with senators and representatives, executives in the various departments of the government, notables from out of town, and a very fine representation from smart residential circles here."

The party was in honor of Nebraska's new senator, Ed Burke. Mullen is the political boss behind Burke. I know of only two important officials who avoid being entertained by political lobbyists, though you can be sure there are a few others. The social lobby is no more deadly than it was in Republican days. But it's more brazen.

Railroad "Harmony" Certain rascally newspapermen have taken to singing railroad songs as they travel on the noisy little monorails cars which tote senators back and forth between the Capitol and the senate office building.

Favorites are "Casey Jones" and "Wreck of the Old 97."

The "engineers" driving the cars, who lead a dreary subway life, think it's swell.

Home Clubs

Old Liberty

The Old Liberty Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. J. B. Hicks, Friday, February 22. Sixteen members answered the roll call and four new members were added with one visitor present.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Guy Hicks, followed by devotionals given by Mrs. A. M. Calhoun, using for the lesson the second chapter of First Corinthians. Miss Beulah Hicks then read the minutes of the last meeting. Reports were given by the different leaders after which a committee was appointed to help make preparations for the county council meeting to be held at Columbus March 29.

As our club missed their demonstration on candy making in December, Miss Griffin gave two demonstrations at this meeting. One on candy making and the other on landscaping. Both were enjoyed by those present. Games were played and the club adjourned until next meeting day when we will meet at the home of Mrs. Frank Shearer. The demonstration will be on making picture frames and chair covers.

Shover Springs

The Shover Springs Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. Hugh Laseter February 21. Fourteen members answered the roll call, with one thing you like about club work. Two new members and 2 visitors were present.

The business meeting and the report of the different leaders was disposed of first, after which the following program on George Washington was rendered.

Song—America. Devotional—Mrs. Hugh Laseter. Birth and early boyhood—Mrs. Lesley Day.

Survivor and Commander of the Army—Mrs. Hugh Laseter. Character—Elinor McWilliams. His Many Services to the Country—Laveta England.

As President, His Death and Burial—Mrs. Howard Collier. Miss Griffin discussed the pruning of roses and shrubs. A round table discussion on care of flowers and potted plants was held.

In the peanut throwing contest Mrs. Hugh Laseter was winner of a bar of candy.

In a contest of writing the largest number of flowers to be taken from the name of Washington, Mrs. John Reed was winner of an Armilla plant. The hostess served delicious cake, peaches and whipped cream. The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Howard Collier March 21.

Nepotism Practice Slightly Altered

Congressmen Make It Less Obvious by "Accommodating" Each Other

WASHINGTON—(AP)—House members nowadays are putting fewer relatives on the house pay roll. At least, records of the disbursing officer showed Sunday that not so many clerks with the same surnames as the representatives for whom they work are getting checks from the government.

The last pay roll of the Seventy-third congress shows 43 house members or about one out of every 10, had in their offices employees with names identical with their own. For the new congress, the total is down to 34, or approximately one in 12.

There is some reason, however, to believe that some congressmen are saying to others, in order to avoid the charge of nepotism: "You put my daughter in your office and I'll hire your son."

And that's to say nothing of "in-laws." The disbursing officer naturally can't go into the ancestry of clerks. But its pay rosters show many members have workers with names the same as those of other congressmen.

The first pay roll of the new congress in comparison with the last of the previous congress, discloses: Twenty-one representatives appear on the first "same-name" list but not on the second. Fourteen were beaten or retired. The other seven, still in congress, changed employes.

Twelve new names are on the second list and these include seven new and five old house members.

Wilson's Picture Placed on Bonds

3 Democrats and a Republican Selected From the Presidents

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Portraits of three Democratic presidents, and one Republican, will appear on the face of the new "baby bonds" which the Treasury will put on sale March 1.

The $25 bond carries a picture of George Washington, while the likeness of Jefferson appears on the $50 bonds; Cleveland on the $100 denomination, Wilson on the $500, and Lincoln on the $1,000 unit.

The Treasury said this will be the first time for a picture of Woodrow Wilson to be used on a public debt security of the United States.

"Moneybags, the banker, is not so bad as some people think he is. He's really a very good fellow when you know him. Only last week I went to him to borrow $1,000, and he received me very politely."

"Did he lend you the money?" "No, but he hesitated a minute before refusing me."

"Now that I have changed my name, success already is beginning to come my way. I have a deal on with one of the bigger independent companies to star in eight pictures a year for the next three years."
